Pete Ham wrote a song originally entitled "If love", but he did not have a strong choir. The moment you write the shared band residency with the Mojos at the 7 Park Avenue at Golderes Green, One night, in the middle of the parts, composer, turnaries, Golders Green, band and his girlfriend Beverly Tucker were about to go out for the night. But just as they were leaving Tom Evans said that he had an ideal for a song - ham said. 'No tonight, I promised Bev.' But she thought it would be wondering if he had done the right thing later, if he went out, "she said," "I'm going to go to Estone, I'm fine about it." "He said," The mouth is smiling, but his eyes are sad." The ham wrote that night was called 'if his love' and has the verse "Well, I can not forget tomorrow. £, When I think about all my sadness, I had you there, but I let you go, and now it's just that I should let you know ... if it's love .. but Pete was not happy with The choir. "[4] Events in Evans's love life would become his future wife, Marianne. She moved to London. It was a sparky relationship. "One night he was up to his friend Karen and told Karen," She left me. I need her back. I can not live, I can not live, I can not live, I can not live anything else." And so the fusion of the two songs, [5] ham and Evans have created success.
