The series of chips na DaleThe Chipmunk brothers Chip 'N' Dale were created in 1943 and got their name when story artist Bill Henson à ¢ Texa suggested a pun on the name of 18th century furniture designer Thomas Chippendale. The characters have been introduced in the private short film Pluto, where they fought with Pluto about whether they could store their nuts in a cannon. Three years later military director based Jack Hannah decided to use them as co-stars in Donald Duck shorts. "I think Gerry Geronimi took a picture with two little mischievous squirrels that just squeaked and chattered with an accelerated soundtrack, but there are no words. I wanted to use them with the duck, but with a little 'more than personality in them. so we decided to put words in your mouth, but their speed so you can just barely understand them, "he recalled Hannah.Â" we gave them both the same personality, but something was missing. A Bill Peeta came up with the suggestion to make one of them a little 'goofball to give them two differences were introduced so viewers they could tell them apart. Chip has a small black nose and protruding teeth, while Dale has a dark red nose and a gap between his teeth. Dalea s hair on the top of the head tends to be ruffled.
